

ENGINEERS, MANAGERS, AND POLITICIANS

The First Fifteen Years of Nationalised Electricity Supply in Britain

Leslie Hannah

Research by

Margaret Ackrill, Frances Bostock, Rachel Lawrence,
Judy Slinn, and Stephanie Zarach

The Johns Hopkins University Press
Baltimore, Maryland

CONTENTS

List of Figures and Tables	vii
Foreword by Thomas P. Hughes	viii
Preface	x
Abbreviations and Glossary	xiii

1 Introduction: Electricity before Nationalisation	1
--	---

PART I NATIONALISATION: THE PROBLEMS OF TRANSITION (1947-9)

2 Citrine's Way	7
3 Meeting the Capacity Crisis	23
4 Half-price Electricity?	29

PART II RECOVERY AND DEVELOPMENT (1948-57)

5 Ministers and Mandarins	41
6 System Expansion: the Area Boards	60
7 Commercial Development: Pricing for Growth	76
8 Generation: Centralisation and Conservatism (1948-53)	94
9 Generation: the Brown Revolution (1954-7)	111
10 Labour Management under Public Ownership	123
11 Retrospect: Citrine, Self and the Management of Change	139
12 The North of Scotland Hydro-Electric Board (1943-60)	149

III THE CONSERVATIVE COUNTER-REVOLUTION (1954-7)

13 Devolving Power	161
14 Coal, Oil and Nuclear Escalation	168
15 The New Men	183

U IV THE BOOM YEARS (1958-62)

16 The Electricity Council: Federalism and Finance	193
--	-----

- 17 Area Boards: Independence, Over-expansion
and the New Rationality
- 18 Incomes and Productivity: Planning for Growth
- 19 Hinton: the Nuclear Retreat
- 20 The CEB in Practice
- 21 A Scottish Alternative? (1955-64)

Epilogue The Second Fifteen Years of
Nationalisation (1963-79)

Statistical Appendix

Notes and References

Index